HELLO JAMIE:

The purpose of this communication is to inform you of some new information:

- While speaking on the phone with my son Conrad about an hour ago, his mother barged her way into his bedroom, saw him talking on the phone with me, then she proceeded to manhandle him, in order to remove the phone from his hands. Conrad informed me that she grabbed his arm, then she held onto his leg and purposely dug her fingernails into his skin. Conrad said his mother briefly gained control of the phone, but he was able to get it back. My Rightful, daily phone calls with my children has always been a HUGE problem for me and the children. Their mother simply does not want them communicating to or with me, she becomes quickly enraged with anger and she does what she can in order to be problematic for everyone. My children have had to sneak their phone calls to me ever since I got their little phone working (she still physically controls their regular phone, but I was able to switch the number to this other phone.) The point is, children should not have to sneak phone calls in order to avoid being yelled at and many times man-handled with her violently removing the phone. I do believe I have previously informed you that she totally destroyed one phone already. This is the reason why Conrad did not want her to also smash his laptop. The fact that she certainly knows she is under investigation and that she did this, is a huge red flag that she will continue to be physical with the children.

- I am attaching my recent Response to another one of her Emergency Motions, with her desperately trying to take the kids away from me. In this "Emergency" (by the way, it has already been ruled that it was not an emergency) she states that I am the reason for all of the police, social worker and DCFS involvement, since January 3rd, when she admitted she purposely went after son Bryan to grab him by the hair but instead she made the side of his head bleed. All of these actions have happened in her house, yet she states that I am responsible for the children's actions AND her actions. This is what money can do for you, in addition to having high paid attorneys. Anyway, the reason why I want you to see this motion is to observe what I have purposely stated in the PREFATORY MATTERS. I finally offer THE core of the problems which we have been having to deal with, all these years. Not one person has done anything about it, in order to take proactive measures. This is why our broken family has ALWAYS had problems all along. I am reminded that all three of my children have, several times now, independently, stated that they are afraid of their mother. It is already anticipated that she will be physically abusive at any time in the future. This is exactly why she does not have a decent relationship with her own children.

- The second attachment contains my ATTACHMENTS to my Response. I would especially like for you to observe the last nine pages, open letters and statements my children have written. It is very easy to understand that I did not in any way assist them in their writings. I only suggested that they do this (back in January) so that they could have a voice.

Jamie, I trust you have been working on this case here and there, even slightly. My Ex is clearly displaying very obvious signs of Parental Alienation. With each and every chance she has, she absolutely does not want the children interacting with me. Yes, I am very upset with our current G.A.L. because he has done nothing proactive for my broken family, even though he is solidly aware of the problems. He knows my Ex admitted in her Anger Management Assessment that she explodes with anger when the children interact with me. Even though our Joint Parenting Agreement states that each party has the right to daily communication with the children, and that the other parent shall act in good faith to make it happen, she has done anything BUT act in good faith for the children's best interests. I thank you for your time again, and I wish this Hell would end soon. Children should not have to live like this.
